Re: PRSS FCC Downlink Registration Project

Dear Mr. Pientka:

As you know, last year NPR Distribution undertook an important initiative on behalf of the Public Radio Satellite System (PRSS) to register earth terminals with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). This service, provided at no cost to qualified stations, was aimed at protecting sites against potentially costly terrestrial interference.

The FCC Downlink Registration Project has completed its review of your station's PRSS downlink. Based on the information provided by WMUK-FM, Comsearch has completed an interference analysis and a frequency coordination and has filed to register your PRSS downlink with the FCC. We have been notified that your registration has been accepted and a call sign has been issued for your downlink. For your information, we have listed below the call sign, the date registration was granted, and a procedure for viewing the registration online. The registration is valid for fifteen years.

As a final step in the project, your station's downlink has been enrolled in a Frequency Protection Service Plan. This service, administered through our contractor, Comsearch, is provided by PRSS at no charge to interconnected stations and will protect the one antenna identified by its call sign below.

Consequently, this letter constitutes the close-out of WMUK-FM's participation in the FCC Downlink Registration Project. If you have any questions regarding this close-out, please contact me at (202) 513-2645 or kthomas@npr.org.

Sincerely,

Kevin Thomas
Project Manager
